Stonehill & Taylor Announces Associate-Level Leadership and Senior Level Promotions

New York (July 2015) – Stonehill & Taylor recently named four employees as Associates, elevating a new group of leaders to manage architecture and interior design projects for the firm, while also promoting six Associates to Senior Associate level leadership.

Two architects, Lanna Sokolova and Scott J. Vautrin, were selected to become Associates, while the Interiors department welcomed designers Abby Bullard and Nikoletta Stagias to the rank of Associate.

“As Stonehill & Taylor continues to grow in both the hospitality and health services industries, we are excited to bring new expertise to our leadership team and honor those who continue to bring their unique perspective to client projects,” said Paul Taylor, president of Stonehill & Taylor.

The firm additionally announced current Associates Nino Scarpaci, Paul Weremchuk, Stephanie Liu and Steve Chew as Senior Associates on the architecture side. Scarpaci’s, Liu’s, Weremchuk’s and Chew’s contributions on several projects including The Plaza Hotel, The NoMad Hotel, and The Refinery Hotel, showcased their strong design voice and leadership skills within the firm. In Interiors, Sara Duffy, design leader for The NoMad Bar, and Sherry Dennis, design leader of the soon-to-open Renwick Hotel, were promoted to Senior Associate for similar contributions.

The new Associates and Senior Associates will continue to work closely with the firm’s principals on current projects as well as new initiatives, and will act as brand and design ambassadors for Stonehill & Taylor.
